

Break-dance improvisations opened the disco party organized for the Olympians after the first competition day. First on the dance floor was Stefan Tsarev from the Mathematical School who mesmerized the computer geniuses with a several-minute-dance on the stage in the garden of Hotel Novotel Plovdiv. After none of the international contestants dared to initiate the dancing session, our guides took on the role of animators and made sure none of their peers was bored. Half an hour later, however, the dance floor was buzzing with teenagers who were dancing to rock rhythms. In the late hours the DJ switched to Latino rhythms that very few could resist.

Those who were tired from the walks during the day preferred playing cards on the lawn in the garden. The place also proved to be extremely suitable for more intimate feelings. Love sparkles could be seen both among the Olympians and among the guides, and they openly succumbed to expressions of tenderness.

While the adults preferred walking in the streets of the Old Town, climbing the hills and visiting the churches, the youth yesterday cooled from the heat in the Aqua Park. Still others, however, went for the high speed rides at the Lauta Karting Track.
